TiO₂ 2021 Take Off: Clear Skies but does Turbulence Loom?

Ti Observer™ Insights February 2021

The February issue of Ti Observer™ Insights – now available – looks back at 2020, with the clarity of a heated-up 4Q market and recent developments out of China. 2021 appears have “stars aligning” for global producers. TiPMC agrees 2021 is the brightest outlook in many years, but storm clouds can be seen in the distance. Insights enable readers to prepare for the future ahead of competitors. This issue complements the complete review of 2020 and the TiO₂ Forecast Pricing outlook available in the coming weeks.

Highlights inside include:

- What is driving the rapid increase in Chinese pricing, and can it be sustained post-Lunar New Year and beyond? What threats lie ahead?
- Who is set to gain significant market share and why?
- What indications do market leaders provide in their review of 2020 relative to pricing? Who is unusually disadvantaged on costs? Why?
- What is the future impact of feedstocks? Who is set to benefit, and who is set to be punished? The answers may surprise you.
